CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

Purposes of this thesis. -- During the early years of teaching, the writer found himself in a position not unlike the type of teacher

to which the Binings referred, when they wrote:

"In a few of our schools, the teacher receives specific instructions in regard to the courses he is to teach and also an outline of the courses. In most of our schools, however, the teacher receives no instructions. He knows little more than that he is to teach certain courses such as American history or civics or economics. He knows that there is a textbook for each pupil and perhaps a few books on the subject in the library. The teacher is confronted with the problem as to what the subject matter of the course should contain and how it should be arranged.

The organization of the course will depend on the aims and objectives that the teacher has in view. Under the old memoriter system, the chief objective was that the pupil should memorize a number of facts. All that was needed was a textbook that contained the factual material. The teacher assigned a certain number of pages to the pupil. The task of the pupil was to memorize the facts presented on the pages assigned."

Following this method and considerable teacher discussion, with a limited amount of pupil activity, it was suggested by the observing superintendent, that the writer employ the "contract" method of teaching social studies. That was the extent of the suggestion, nothing further was offered, so that prodigious inquiry resulted in no success. Some had heard of the method, but little additional information was forthcoming. The preceding instructors had used "outlines" which were personal and no record or copies were to be obtained. However, a limited knowledge enabled the writer to build a very imperfect contract, which was offered to the pupils in an eleventh-grade high school United States history class.

The situation was ideal for the "Unit" method, if it had been known. This is clearly shown from the following data of the students' intelligence quotients.

Table 1. Distribution of Intelligence Quotients of an Eleventh-grade Class in United States History.

	Intelligence Quotients	Number of Pupils
High	116-120	1
	111-115	5
	106-110	Ħ
	101-105	3
	96-100	2
	91- 95	3
	86- 90	1
Low	81- 85	1
		Total 20
		Median 103
		Girls 12
		Boys 8

The above represents an eleventh-grade in a small high school.

Due to the limited numbers and facilities, it was impossible to have homogeneous grouping and the 20 individual high and low scores above range from 120 to 81, with the median of 103.

Notwithstanding, the suggested "contract" method was entirely inadequate, because of the limited knowledge of the writer. During

1 -4 + 9 9 - 4 4 4 6 4 . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . the past year the classes which the writer is to teach have had four different teachers, who have employed the question and answer method of teaching, each with his distinct personality, biases, and objectives. No record of study or progress was to be found.

Thus, the writer, with his past experiences, and a knowledge of his situation, has set about to build three Units, to conform with the principles of the course in "Unit Assignment in Secondary Education," offered by Doctor Roy O. Billett of Boston University. The ideas and the terminology used in building these units and unit assignments are directly credited to Doctor Billett's course, from which a clearer understanding of the unit and unit assignment, may be utilized during the school year 1946-1947 by the writer.

It should be made clear that the unit is not: "An aggregation of materials placed side by side because they describe events which happened to take place at approximately the same time. Such events are discontinuous and noncumulative; they are not bound together by close relationships." Such method would prove to be too factual and the pupil would do nothing more than memorize events, places, and dates.

Neither is the unit: "The same as a topic, or a thread or phase of historical development considered from its beginnings to its end."

Such would eliminate close relationship to other important materials, which would cause for much misunderstanding to movements which might vitally effect the study and appreciation of the course.

However, it may be fully understood that "unit organization is the first major phase of the unit method, which in turn is a systematic way of taking into consideration and applying with due emphasis, every fundamental educational principle which should function in every good teaching-learning cycle." Thus, the unit and unit assignment is a translation of the topic for the purpose of organizing the course. In this way, we will have a three-fold advantage:

- (1) A record of the teacher and his work.
- (2) Teacher-growth in service.
- (3) An incentive to growth of course.

Throughout this thesis and the three units, the writer intends to adhere to the fundamental aims of teaching social studies. The results which should be gained are two-fold: (1) "The enrichment and development of the lives of pupils to the greatest extent of their abilities and powers within their environment, and (2) the training of pupils to take their place in a democratic society in such a way as to make their country a better place in which to live." In order to accomplish this, the teaching of factual knowledge is not adequate, therefore, we find the solution in the utilization of the unit and unit assignment, which is broad in its concepts.

Therefore, the outcome of these aims will find that:

"(1) The accumulation of certain definite knowledge of the past wisely chosen to explain the present in accord with general aims of Secondary Education. (2) The development of abilities which are needed for impartial and effective investigation of Social Materials and for rendering constructive decisions about social affairs."1

In addition, cultural appreciation, continuity of historical principles, and loyalty and ideals may be developed to make for better civic education and better living. This is the task of the teacher, who must have these ideals in order to inculcate them into the pupils' interest. In short, the ideals of a democratic society should be constantly before the pupil.

Throughout, the above aims will serve for the following units, in order to divert from and erase the rote memory phase of teaching social studies. The units will be built to provide for pupil activity, individual differences, and pupil needs; also to promote interest, and appreciation for social studies.

The units, since they are not in use at this writing, will undergo changes. Notwithstanding, their record value should prevent repetition of the above confusion and provide an organization of the present course of study.

Terminology. -- The following items, must be understood in the building of units and unit assignments and their related importance involved in the teaching of the unit method.

1- The unit is a brief statement of concepts and skills, which the 1/ Ibid, p. 45.

- teacher expects the pupils to attain. It is the goal of the teacher, and is written in terse declarative sentences.
- 2- The delimitation of the unit is a series of lesser concepts and/or skills which supports the broad concepts of the unit. It serves as a boundary for the material to be taught by the teacher. It is written declaratively and is never shown to the pupils.
- 3- Indirect learning products are not necessarily primary products or objects of the unit, but the teacher may expect ideals and appreciations from them in the way of by-products.
- The unit assignment includes all the teacher-pupil activity. It should be written in a vocabulary familiar to the pupils' level, and the instructions for procedure and introduction should be clearly stated by the teacher, in order that it may serve as a guide to the pupils learning process. The unit assignment should promote interest and put pupils into an interrogative frame of mind.
- 5- Optional related activities should be many, and varied. They serve to provide for individual differences in special ability, interest, and skill. Following the required activities, the pupils are urged to do as many optional and related activities that time permits. The activities are to be guided and approved by the teacher. A record or types of activity is maintained on a three by five card, placed in a card file, and kept on the reference shelf or in a box, which is accessible to the entire class.
- bo Guide sheet includes all or part of the introduction, suggestions of how to study the unit, the required activities, references, and optional related activities. It may be several sheets bound together and should contribute much to the understanding of the unit assignment.

7- Tests provide a picture of pupil achievement and progress. In the study of history the objective multiple-choice type is recommended for manifestation of judgment and understanding. The true or false type is used primarily to test factual knowledge. Tests, although given to determine marks, offer a picture of pupil growth and achievement.

Explanation of Codes. — The first number which is followed by a colon (:) represents the text or book which is found in the reference list at the end of the unit. This is followed by the numbered pages of the book, the dash (-) between the page numbers signifies that the related materials may be obtained on all of these pages, a comma (,) signifies separate pages, and a semi-colon (;) is the end of the reference to be found in any one book.

(10:258-290, 320-330; 7:346-370.)

10 = Muzzey, pages 258 to 290 and pages 320 to 330

7 = Hicks, pages 346 to 370

Throughout all three units, the above code will be applicable.

Contents of the Chapters. -- This thesis contains a title page, a table of contents, an introduction, three teaching units, three achievement tests, an appendix, and a related bibliography. Chapter I, which is the introduction, contains the reason and justification for the writers selection of building satisfactory units, including specific aims and objectives, the reason for and definitions of related terminology, a key or guide to code numbers, and a resume of the contents of the chapters of this thesis. Chapters II, III, and IV are related to different phases of subject-matter units to be taught in an eleventh-grade United States History class. Chapter II is the unit "Nationalism, 1800-1828". Chapter III is the unit "How Our Country Faced Sectionalism". Chapter IV is the unit "Westward to the Pacific". The last three chapters are accompanied by achievement tests and the appendix contains the keys to each test. At the end of the thesis is a bibliography to which the writer has constantly referred for facts and verification. Some deal with teaching social studies and the majority of the references devote much to the building of the more acceptable units.

CHAPTER II

TOPIC: UNIT ORGANIZATION OF TOPIC ON NATIONALISM 1800-1828

The Unit

From 1800 to 1828, Nationalism grew in the United States.

Jefferson, Monroe, Marshall, and Jackson became real representative leaders of and for the people. The vast Territory of Louisiana was sold by France and our geographical size became doubled. Trade with foreign countries soon brought us into war with England in 1812.

When Jackson was elected president in 1828, he did not disappoint the people with his reforms and "spoils system". During this strong period of nationalism, the roots of sectionalism took hold and the Monroe Doctrine became our foreign policy.

Delimitation of the Unit

- Jefferson was the leader of the Anti-Federalists or Republicans, who were largely farmers.
- 2. They were interested in more power for the States than for the National Government.
- 3. Farmers of the Southwest and Northwest were encouraged to ship their goods through New Orleans.
- 4. Against his "strict" interpretation of the constitution, Jefferson purchased the Territory of Louisiana.
- 5. England and France were at war from 1793-1815 and needed large supplies of wheat, corn, and meat.

- 6. The United States was a neutral country and shipped these commodities to Europe and England, which led to the seizure of neutral ships carrying contraband goods.
- 7. Trade, seizure, and search led us into war with England in 1812 during Madison's administration.
- 8. The United States was not prepared for war, but the "War Hawks" were convincing.
- 9. Compared with England:
  - (a) The United States had eighteen ships, while England had nine hundred.
  - (b) Our regular army was made up of six thousand seven hundred men.
  - (c) England easily blockeded American ports.
- 10. The United States was humiliated by constant failure in the Canadian campaign and the British march on Washington and Baltimore.
- 11. Such a great mistake did produce spirit and patriotism and revealed many weaknesses which we have corrected.
- 12. During the "Era of Good Feeling" the United States developed the west and industry.
- 13. The physical geography of the United States influenced:
  - (a) transportation
  - (b) manufacturing
  - (c) the movement to the west
  - (d) agriculture
  - (e) shipbuilding

- 14. Our foreign policy was influenced by Adams and Monroe.
- 15. Henry Clay and John C. Calhoun influenced the question of tariffs and the "American System".
- 16. The newly acquired territory caused ill-feeling over slavery.
- 17. Marshall's many Supreme Court decisions were most significant.
- 18. For almost thirty years the middle class people gained control of our National Government.
- 19. The age of aristocracy ended when Jackson became President in 1829.

Indirect Learning Products

- A. Appreciation: (1) toward our early, courageous leaders, (2) for the growth of our foreign policy, (3) for our judicial system and decisions.
- B. Attitudes: (1) for nationalistic feeling which has grown during the last hundred years, (2) for intelligent thinking toward our present foreign relations.

C. Skills: (1) in pooling and sharing of interest, and socialization during laboratory phase, (2) in making references and intelligent use of bibliography, (3) mastery of facts and problem-solvingthinking for future use in intelligent thinking toward present world problems.

The Unit Assignment

- I. The following list of twenty pictures will be neatly displayed on two bulls tin boards in the front of the room:
  - (1) Thomas Jefferson
  - (2) President Madison
  - (3) British officers forcing an American sailor to join the British Navy
  - (4) Napoleon discussing the sale of the Louisiana Territory
  - (5) The duel in which Aaron Burr killed Alexander Hamilton
  - (6) The Louisiana Purchase (Monroe, Livingston, and Tallyrand)
  - (7) Henry Clay
  - (8) John C. Calhoun
  - (9) James Monroe
  - (10) Commodore Thomas MacDonough
  - (11) Perry at the Battle of Lake Erie
  - (12) The Battle of "Constitution" and "Guerriere"
  - (13) Andrew Jackson in Florida
  - (14) The burning of Washington in 1814
  - (15) Covered wagon train moving westward

Teacher Introduction of Unit

Introduction. -- With the aid of your dictionary, look up the word "nationalism" ["devotion to national interests or national unit and independence"]. Look up "national" ["patriotic"]. Discuss the spirit of nationalism which prevailed in the United States on December 7, 1941.

Compare it with nationalism in 1775.

In 1800, the government passed from the control of the Federalists, who believed in the principle of leadership, into the hands of the Republicans (not present day political party), who had more faith in the capacity of the people to govern themselves. Such a democratic practice was destined to permanently influence American ideas. European conflict made it possible for us to purchase the Louisiana Territory and ten years later found us on the brink of war.

Do you recall the recent neutrality act of 1937, which was repealed in 1939? Why did we repeal our Neutrality Act?

The recent war found us in a situation not unlike our forefathers in 1812 when our foreign trade and business were threatened.

Additional comparison will be made to the war of 1914-1918, and our position prior to our entrance into World War I.

Such has found us in foreign entanglements which were against the hope of Washington's farewell address. Therefore, we should have a foreign policy in the United States [extensive discussion on foreign policy of Russia, England, and France].

Before passing out guide sheet, the following thought question will be considered: The success of a foreign policy depends upon the nationalistic attitude of the people of a country!

Questions and problems. -- Find a complete answer to each of the following. Write neatly in your notebook, all the materials and findings that may be necessary to show the conclusion for each.

1. What classes of the people was Jefferson championing? Why not all classes? In what groups or classes were the Federalists interested? Why? 3: 380-383; 6: 213; 7: 254-258; 10: 195-198.

CHAPTER III

TOPIC: UNIT ORGANIZATION OF THE TOPIC ON HOW OUR COUNTRY

FACED SECTIONALISM

The Unit

For fifty years, southern planters had fought against the northern merchants. The latter for profits from trade and manufacturing, the former for profits from cotton. Congressional arguments over (1) states rights, (2) slavery, (3) tariff were the main causes. With the election of Lincoln, the South felt slavery would be abolished, thus they broke from the Union. The military, economic, and political events of the North and South were quite different. The "war of the lost cause" which began in April, 1861, resulted in waste, destruction, and ruin.

Delimitation of the Unit

- 1. The North and South were growing steadily in different ways.
- 2. The southern plantation shipped cotton to be manufactured to the northern states and England.
- 3. Some wealthy southerners resented their dependence on the North for manufactured goods.
- 4. Some northerners pictured the wealthy southern landowner living by the misery of their slaves.
- 5. The westward expansion and slavery in the territories led to feelings of sectionalism.
- 6. The Compromise of 1850 and the Missouri Compromise of 1820 were but

- vain attempts to settle the issues.
- 7. The northern manufacturers wanted high tariff on foreign goods, to protect their goods.
- 8. The South bought much manufactured products from England and felt that the North would have a monopoly.
- 9. John Brown's raid and the Dred Scott decision were portents which placed the Union in serious peril.
- 10. The election of Lincoln was resented by the South, who felt he would abolish slavery.
- 11. By the end of 1860, it was clear that only war could settle the dispute between the North and South.
- 12. It began with the secession of the southern states, who formed the Confederate States of America.
- 13. While the economic system of free labor and slave labor was opposed, the political idea of national unity was threatened by states! rights.
- 14. The North and South were different in geographical, economic, and social factors:
  - (a) Many railroads ran east and west, North had two times as many miles of railroad then the South.
  - (b) Southern history had given heritage to the Union.
  - (c) The North possessed more than two-thirds of the nation's capital.
  - (d) The South had only a few manufacturing industries.
  - (e) The North controlled the nation's foreign commerce.

- (f) In the twenty-three northern states there were 22,000,000 people.
- (g) In the eleven southern states there were 9,000,000 people, one-third of whom were slaves.
- 15. The middle class in England sympathized with the northern factory wage earners.
- 16. English aristocracy sympathized with the wealthy southern plantation society.
- 17. Napoleon III of France encouraged the government of the seccession, only interested in his colonial power in Mexico which was in defiance with the Monroe Doctrine.
- 18. In April, 1861, actual fighting began between the two sections and for four years the entire country thought only of war.
- 19. The Civil War involved the following:
  - (a) Blockades and navy.
  - (b) Great generals and military tactics.
  - (c) Heroism of the men in blue and gray.
  - (d) Civil affairs and war financing.
  - (e) Conscription of soldiers.
  - (f) Humanitarian phase of suffering and loss.
  - (g) The Emancipation Proclamation.
  - (h) Lincoln's attitude and the outcome of the struggle.
- 20. The South was laid to waste. Homes were ruined. Crops were destroyed and billions of dollars were spent.
- 21. The wealth and power of the North proved to be the deciding factor

Teacher Introduction of Unit

Introduction. With the aid of your dictionary look up the word "sectionalism", / "undue devotion to the interest peculiar to a section of the country; sectional feeling, spirit, prejudice" /. Do we have sectionalism in the United States today? (Reference to Congressional issues which may be current at the time of this introduction).

The raising of cotton needed only a few simple tools which the slaves could be taught to use. Therefore, it was not necessary to employ skilled labor and the planter thought it would be impossible to carry on work at a profit without slaves. To do away with slaves would ruin the industry of the South. In reality, slavery nearly broke up the Union. The ceal, iron, and water power resources of the South were not put to use as they were in the manufacturing North. Cotton became "king" and the South settled down to raise one crop.

The North felt that slavery everywhere in the United States should stop. The feeling grew and the northern and southern Members of Congress could not agree on the slavery question. It could not be a forgotten discussion of Congress because when a new Territory was to be admitted to the Union as a State, Congress had to decide whether or not it would foster slavery.

Those against slavery believed in the equality and "inalienable rights" as found in the Declaration of Independence. The Compromises of 1820 and 1850, coupled with the public opinion and "power of the press" caused the feeling to grow not unlike a rolling snowball. Soon the idea of abolition grew and gradually won more and more people to its side. The trouble over Kansas and Nebraska aroused the whole country and increased the feeling of dislike between the North and South. Popular belief everywhere agreed that the slavery question would not be settled by compromises.

The following questions are to be discussed: (a) Could we have avoided the Civil War and the recent World War II?, (b) Is it possible for separate governments to function in the United States? (Reference made to present conditions with Canada), and (c) What would be the possible situation if slavery existed in the United States today?

Questions and problems .-- Find a complete answer to each of the

CHAPTER IV

TOPIC: UNIT ORGANIZATION OF THE TOPIC ON EXPANSION TO

The Unit

With the signing of the Treaty of Ghent our territorial and European difficulties were not ended. In 1819 the United States purchased Florida from Spain and agreed not to claim Texas as part of the Louisiana Purchase. England was still a neighbor in the north along the Oregon territory. The growth of nationalism soon led to the appearance of "Manifest Destiny", which theory claimed that, "the United States would move westward until it reached the Pacific". Many factors and obstacles were to be overcome, including: (1) boundary disputes, (2) unsatisfaction of southwestern farmers, (3) slavery, (4) immigration, and

(5) technological improvement. A war with Mexico, the Gadsden Purchase, and boundary agreements with England were the obstacles of the Pacific expansion.

Dalimitation of the Unit

- 1. The first explorers and pioneers made their way across the Appalachian Mountains after the Revolutionary War.
- 2. During 1806-1807, roads and turnpikes were built to bind the East and West (Ohio).
- The War of 1812 proved the need for good roads and caused immigration into the Louisiana Territory.

10-

- 4. The South needed more land because cotton production exhausted soil rapidly and the rotation of crops was not yet realized.
- 5. Texas' soil and climate made it a cotton planters' paradise, which soon became settled by American cotton planters.
- 6. This territory was claimed by both the United States and Spain and later during Santa Anna's dictatorship, by Mexico.
- 7. The war for Texas' independence (1836) led to the annexation by the United States.
- 8. This found the United States and Mexico at War in 1848, caused by boundary disputes and "American blood shed on American soil".
- 9. No unlike the recent war, it produced outstanding men like:
  - (a) John C. Fremont
  - (b) General W. Scott
  - (c) General Taylor
  - (d) General Kearny
  - (e) Buena Vista
- 10. The Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo which ended the war:
  - (a) established the boundary between Mexico and the United States.
  - (b) Mexico ceded the territory of California and New Mexico to the United States for fifteen million dollars.
- 11. In 1853, the United States purchased the southern part of Arizona and New Mexico (Gadsden Purchase).
- 12. The Northwest territory (Oregon Country) was claimed by Spain, Russia, Great Britain, and the United States.
- 12. This was settled by the Treaty of 1824 and Joint Occupation.

, T • i, . 1 **. · · . .

- 14. Gradual westward penetration was broken by the discovery of gold in California in 1848.
- 15. Thousands of settlers set out overland for the West and the Pacific coast.
- 16. With an increase in population from time to time, many territories were admitted to statehood.
- 17. Transportation and the invention of the telegraph became an important factor.
- 18. By 1850, the "Manifest Destiny" became a reality.

  - (1) The above includes a colorful picture entitled, " at Buena Vista the Americans turned potential disaster into an over-whelming victory that cost Santa Anna nearly half of his army," and a well written article on the friendliness of Mexico during World Wars I and II.

Teacher Introduction of Unit

Introduction. -- A single force which shaped our country was the frontier, which moved from the Atlantic and across the Rockies, to encourage individual iniative and nationalistic spirit.

The first frontier was tied too closely with Europe; the second was tied to the coast settlements; but the third was independent, and the

. ` A 11-. | . 199 0 120101 ----- people of the Mississippi Valley looked West rather than to the East.

The expeditions of Lewis and Clark, the establishment of a fur company by William Ashley, and the work of Doctor Marcus Whitman soon led many carevans of settlers to cross the plains and mountains to the Far West.

Hardships and diplomacy played an important role in the acquisition of western lands and finally war with Mexico was considered as our "Year of Decision". Today, one hundred years later, we look toward Mexico as one of our good neighbors.

Was the United States an agressive nation in 1846? Is the way of the aggressor most successful and the best course to choose?

Consider for a moment the relationship between Mexico and the United States during World Wars I and II. Did it have any relationship in Western Hemisphere security? These are but a few of the questions with which we shall be confronted during the study of this unit on expansion.

Questions and problems. -- Find a complete answer to each of the following. Write neatly in your notebook, all the materials and findings that may be necessary to show the conclusion for each.

BIELIOGRAPHY

Adams, James Truslow, and Vannest, Charles Garrett, The Record of America, Charles Scribner's Sons, Boston, 1940. 980 pages.

This is the basic text to be used during study of eleventh-grade American history. The text has eleven different so-called units with topics under each unit.

Baily, D. C., "A New Approach to American History", Chicago, University of Chicago Press, 1927. 82 pages.

One of the first books to illustrate the organization and arrangement of a complete whole topic and a series of units.

Billett, Roy O., Fundamentals of Secondary-School Teaching, Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston, 1940, pages 459-655.

A valid explanation and illustration of various units, terminology, and analysis of the unit method of teaching.

School Review (Jamuary, 1943), 40:1, pages 17-32.

This is a survey of the advantages and of the disadvantages of the unit plan as observed by the pupils, and also is included an intelligent list of suggestions for correcting the disadvantages.

Promotion. Bulletin, Number 17, National Survey of Secondary Education, Monograph Number 13, United States Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., 1933, pages 227-391.

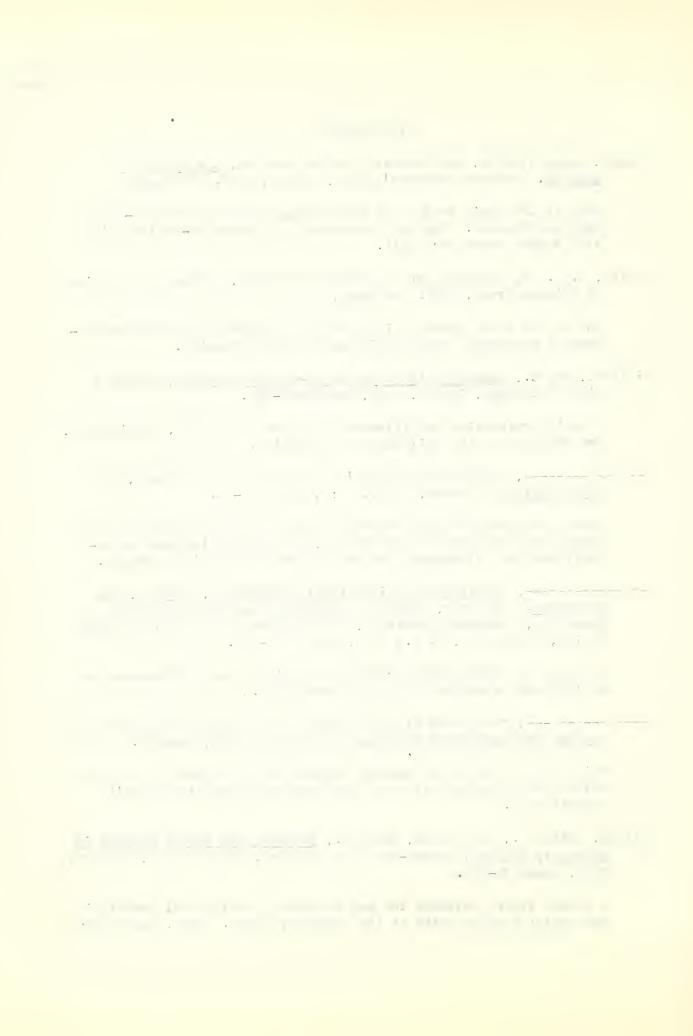

A report of high schools provisions for individual differences up to 1932 and an analysis of these provisions.

the Eastern Commercial Teachers Association, 1942, page 23.

This offers a clear and concise definition of the meaning of unit method and contains a list of the important principles of unit organization.

Bining, Arthur C., and Bining, David H., Teaching the Social Studies in Secondary Schools, McGraw-Hill Book Company, Incorporated, New York, 1935, pages 36-202.

A simple styled textbook for any potential professional teacher in the social studies field at the secondary level. Also, may be used by teachers in the field who are interested in the unit plan of teaching history.

Crawford, C. C., and Stagle, L. M., "The Use of the Laboratory Method in Social Studies", Historical Outlook (March, 1930), pages 112-115.

A good reference for the functional use of schoolroom equipment and the problems which are unfavorable.

Davis, Robert A., Psychology of Learning, McGraw-Hill Book Company, Incorporated, New York, 1935, pages 157-162.

This book is developed around the psychology of learning and its general applications to education. Also includes, and explains, the reason for slow periods of no apparent learning which is sometimes due to poor textbook construction.

Greenman, R. B., "The Unit Assignment in the Eleventh-Grade United States History Class of a Small Six-Year High School", Unpublished Thesis, Boston University, 1939, 143 pages.

A master's thesis prepared for Doctor Roy O. Billett's seminar at Boston University.

Kelty, Mary G., Learning and Teaching History in the Middle Grades. Ginn and Company, Boston, 1928, pages 20-24.

A good fundamental definition of what the unit is and what it is not. It is a well organized presentation of learning and teaching American history at the middle grade level. It is complete with questions, tests, and visual aids.

National Council for Social Studies, Sixth Yearbook, McKinley Publishing Company, Philadelphia, 1936. 208 pages.

This includes teaching techniques for several subjects and subject correlation. Also includes the element of a social studies program.

Scribner's Sons, Charles, A Descriptive Brief on The Record of America, Advertising Circular, New York, 1940, 6 pages.

A mimeographed advertising circular distributed in 1940 in advance of sale of history text by Adams and Vannest (The Record of America). Includes a biography of the authors and explanation of contents and style.

Thorndike, Edward Lee, Teachers' Word Book, New York Teachers College, Columbia University, 1931. 182 pages.

This book is a greatly improved extension of Thorndike's Teachers!

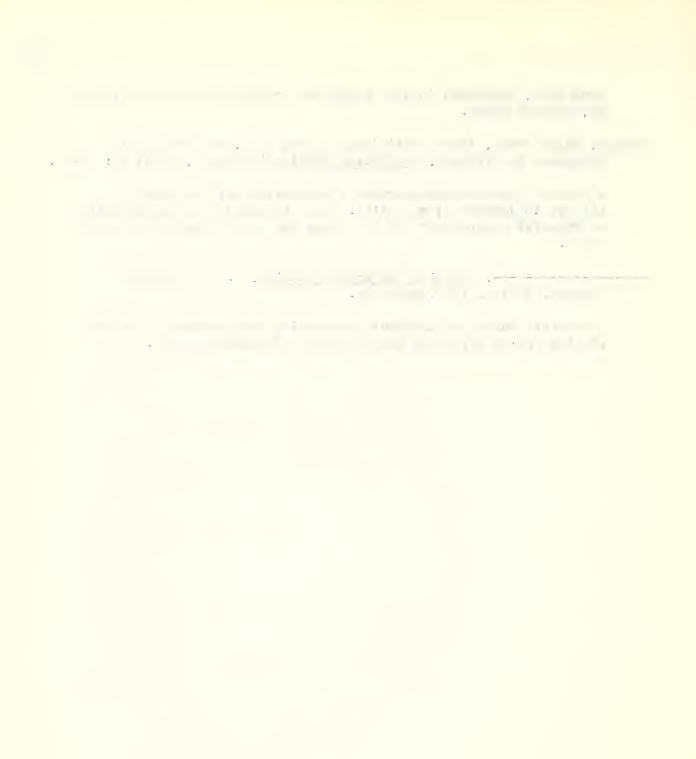

Word Book, published in 1921 which has extended the list to include 20,000 more words.

Wesley, Edgar Bruce, "Some Criticisms of Word List, with Particular Reference to History", The Social Studies (February, 1934) 25: 78-32.

A concise discussion concerning a vocabulary for the study of history in defense of word list. Also included is a clarification of "special vocabulary" and the value and useful purpose of word lists.

Company, Boston, 1937, page 361.

A complete survey of knowledge concerning the teaching of social studies over a seventeen year period in secondary school.
